Decision on Municipal Court Expected in Legislature Soon

Fayette Counties may know by this time tomorrow whether they will have a municipal court or continue with present judicial system of a Washington C. H. police court and justices of the peace.

Top bill on the agenda of 11 bills before the House of the state Legislature is the statewide municipal court act. It recreates the present 39 city courts under a single law and adds 15 new ones. One of the 15 new courts would be in Washington C. H.

If the bill is approved—over formal protest of the Washington C. H. council—a municipal court would be set up in Washington C. H. to serve all of Fayette County except Jefferson Township, including Jeffersonville, the county's largest village.

The municipal court bill already had been approved by the Senate and it has the OK of the House committee.

Opposition of council stems from an asserted belief that the establishment of a municipal court here should be delayed until the people "know what it's all about."

The move was sponsored by the Fayette County Bar Association (the county's lawyers) and has been backed by it. A spokesman for the association pointed out that the municipal court question cannot, under the law, be submitted to a vote of the people. He added that he knew of no way to determine the will of the people on the question.

Drive for Adjournment On in Ohio Legislature

COLUMBUS, May 23—(AP)—The two Houses of the Ohio Legislature had 25 bills up for vote today in their drive for quick adjournment.

Only a handful, however, are of major importance. And none touches on the subject of spending—the biggest problem of this assembly.

Top bill on the House agenda of 11 bills is the state-wide municipal court act.

The Senate has these measures, among others, before it:

A House-approved bill to require annual inspections of all motor vehicles under the supervision of the State Highway Patrol.

A bill to require motorists to be financially responsible. It already has been approved by the House. A House-approved measure to permit county commissioners to levy taxes for tuberculosis patients in hospitals other than county tuberculosis institutions.

Violent Storm Lashes County

Dry South Soaked By Heavy Rains

Lightning struck the Jeffersonville pump house and burned out a motor during the violent electrical storm which raged over that community Tuesday night.

An auxiliary motor was put into use to keep the pumps, which furnish the town with water, in operation.

The municipal house is located about 100 yards from the Jeffersonville school buildings, where a large number of people had assembled for school activities.

The storm only lasted a short while, but a large amount of water fell. Rainfall here Tuesday night totaled .59 of an inch, bringing the total since Sunday noon to 2.42 inches.

Rain here Tuesday was accompanied by an electrical storm early in the night, and was followed by a series of light showers which lasted until early Wednesday.

Part of the county has had little or no rain during the past three days.

In the immediate area precipitation has been so heavy that farm work had to be halted for three or four days.

Drought-stricken Area In South Is Soaked

(By The Associated Press) Skies cleared over the southern great plains area today after torrential rains hit the area. Hardest hit by the cloudbursts was Hays, Kans., where four persons died and three others were missing and believed drowned in a flash flood.

Damage to property in Hays was estimated at more than $1,000,000 as flood waters from Big Creek spread over 75 blocks of the northwest Kansas community of 8,000 yesterday. Hundreds of persons were forced to evacuate their homes.

The rains moved into parts of the drought-stricken southland and heavy falls were reported in some sections of Kentucky and Tennessee. The wet belt extended from Tennessee northeastward to New York State. Louisville reported more than an inch of rain in a six-hour period.

There were showers along the northern Pacific coast but fair weather was reported in other parts of the country. It was cool from the Great Lakes region southwestward to the central plains. The mercury dropped to 28 above at Grand Marais, Mich., early today.

STORM LASHES CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, May 23—(AP)—Lightning killed one man and injured another yesterday as a brief thunderstorm swept through this area.

Elmer J. Schrock, 32, was killed by a bolt of lightning while he was driving a team of horses on his farm near Burton in neighboring Geauga County.

Another bolt struck a bridge on which Albert H. Liskowski, 22, was working in suburban Rocky River, knocking him unconscious. He was reported in good condition.

The storm also stalled several Cleveland Transit System buses by blowing out their fuse boxes, knocked down a number of utility poles and lines, and cut off electrical power to some sections for more than two hours. The rainfall was only .27 inch.

Bigger Atomic Blast Coming, Is Hint

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—Hints of still another and even bigger atomic explosion at the mid-Pacific nuclear weapons proving grounds were current today.

A news conference statement by Rep. Jackson (D-Wash.) more than ten days ago suggested a series of tests at Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands had been ended. But there were fresh indications today another explosion remained on the schedule after Jackson's return from the proving grounds.

For one thing, the Atomic Energy Commission so far had not issued its customary brief announcement on the conclusion of a series of tests. The commission was still standing on its announcement of more than a week ago that "we are engaged in a test program" at Eniwetok.

There seemed reason to believe the final shot of the current Eniwetok experiments, when ever made, was expected to be the most powerful set off. Nuclear weapons experts have been aiming at an explosion about ten times the magnitude of the original "model T" bombs used at back to the House with amendments a bill to modernize the state's school building code and to permit the use of less expensive materials. The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill giving blind pensioners $5 more on their maximum allowance -- an increase from $55 to $60. The bill also contains a provision permitting pensioners to earn up to $50 a month without affecting their pensions.

The House approved and sent to the Senate a measure which would qualify for federal aid about 6,000 totally and permanently disabled Ohioans now on poor relief. It would bring Ohio under a new Social Security program, but the Senate already has approved a bill frankly designed to prevent Ohio from participating in the program.

The House reconsidered an earlier defeat and sent to the Senate a bill to increase judges' salaries. Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch of Mansfield said the bill would affect 149 common pleas judges by giving them the same pay raise as those judges starting new terms.

In other actions the House: Approved a bill giving the state racing commission power to allow extra harness race days for those rained out during regular meetings May 12-June 16 and Oct. 13-27.

The Senate defeated a bill to permit sale of milk in restaurants from bulk dispensers. It received a 16-13 vote, one short of a constitutional majority.

Staid Republicans But Don't Want to Impeach Truman

WAKEFIELD, N. H., May 23—(AP)—The residents of this small rural community don't want to take President Truman's job away from him -- although most of them are known die-hard Republicans.

They voted in a special town meeting last night on the question:

"Should Harry Truman be impeached?"

The answer was "no" by a vote of 48 to 17, with 35 of those present not voting.

The whole matter was brought to a head for the first time anywhere by William N. Sparhawk, Jr., a 32-year-old chicken farmer who served as an army captain in World War II.

He circulated a petition for a special town meeting to vote on the question. He needed 10 signatures but he said 50 residents signed the petition.

Exactly 100 of the town's 795 voters showed up for the unusual meeting in the town hall.

Income Tax Boost Gets Committee OK

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—In a stormy, shouting session, the House Ways and Means Committee voted today for a flat 1½ per cent increase for individual income taxpayers and for a boost in the excess profits tax on corporations.

Both revisions were agreed upon by straight party line votes, and Republican members of the committee declared angrily that the changes were "railroaded through."

"I resent legislating by party caucuses," Rep. Simpson (R-Pa.) told reporters. Rep. Reed of New York, ranking Republican member of the committee, told the newsmen there had been "a major row" in today's session.

The flat 1½ per cent increase in everybody's income tax was substituted for the committee's original plan of a raise of three percentage points in the rate in each tax bracket.

Staff aides said about the same amount of additional revenue would be raised under either system -- $2,845,000,000 in a full year's operation.

Watchdogs Vicious But Only with Cops

TOLEDO, May 23—(AP)—Mrs. Marcia Miller left her front door open while she chatted with a neighbor yesterday. She knew her two dogs, sleeping by a radio in the living room, would protect her belongings.

When she returned the dogs were sound asleep, the back door had been opened and the radio was gone.

When two policemen arrived to investigate, the dogs awakened and tried to keep them from entering the house.

Hiroshima and Nagasaki in World War II.

This has led to speculation that there has been developed a new type of bomb core and of the system of "lenses" which surround it and contain the nuclear reaction until a high order of explosive force is built up. In this way, the efficiency of the bomb could be stepped up without a substantial change in shape or weight.

The next atomic test series is looked for, perhaps early next fall, in the Aleutian Islands.

ALLIES CHASE REDS BACK

Iran Viewed as Danger Spot By Gen. Bradley at Hearing

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—Gen. Omar Bradley acknowledged today that fighting in Korea limits U. S. ability to counter possible Russian aggression elsewhere. He named Iran, with its oil wealth, as in "danger."

But Bradley insisted on inquiring senators that the strategy proposed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur would not end the Korean war. He told them:

"We are not prolonging this war just for the fun of it. The only difference is Gen. MacArthur thinks that to do certain additional operations would be decisive and we do not think they would be decisive."

Bradley is chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and by "we" he meant himself and the other members of that top military command.

He testified at hearings by the Senate armed services and foreign relations committees on MacArthur's dismissal from his Far Eastern commands.

In response to questions from Senator Brewster (R-Maine), Bradley ticked off Iran, Yugoslavia and Indochina as all points of possible Soviet aggression.

Brewster had asked what thought the chiefs of staff had given to the desirability of winding up the Korean war in the light of the "apparent imminence of trouble in Iran."

"Well, of course," Bradley replied, "the longer the problem in Korea keeps up, the less we are prepared to meet any movement anywhere else. I would prefer not to say as to Iran, because I am not sure that has too much application in our case."

"There is a danger, of course, of the Russians moving into Iran and starting another aggression. Whether or not that is any more dangerous than Yugoslavia or Indochina or some other place, I am not prepared to say; but certainly it is a point of danger and we would like to be in a better position to meet any further aggression if it occurred."

Iran currently is potentially a trouble spot because of a dispute between the Iranian government and the British over Iran's decision to nationalize its rich oil fields. They have been under long-term lease to a British company.

The oil fields have long been of strategic importance. They supply much of Europe's needs, and this oil flow might be cut off if the fields fell into Russian hands.

MacArthur Plan Risky

Then, in response to questions by Senator Flanders (R-Vt), Bradley insisted the MacArthur program would not end the Korean situation.

He conceded that adopting MacArthur's policies "might help a little bit, but to offset that you would run the risk of opening up World War III."

MacArthur was fired for advocating publicly a program calling for the bombing of Manchuria and Red China supply bases, a naval and economic blockade of the China coast, and use of Chinese Nationalist troops based on Formosa.

Bradley said the basis of the present public controversy over Far Eastern policies is that MacArthur made his proposals "and the people, some of them, believed it and jumped at this solution that it would be decisive and end the war."

"We don't think it would," he continued.

U. S. Struggle for Peace

Senator Russell (D-Ga.), who is presiding, rejected a suggestion by Senator Tobey (R-NH) that the whole thing be called off because "when we get all through, Mr. MacArthur will still be deposed." While not going that far, other senators advocated measures to shorten up the inquiry.

Bradley, although he did not suggest any curtailment of the hearing, did tell the Senate committees yesterday the revelations being made during the hearings might incite Russia to start aggression elsewhere. He also declared:

"I think it is very harmful to our security and to our country and to our future security to have to pass on to Russia all of our intentions, all of our thoughts, all of our capabilities."

Missing Girl Hunted In Mountain Wilds

SANTA ANA, Calif., May 23—(AP)—The intensive search for missing 10-year-old Patricia Jean Hull extended into remote and mountainous areas of Orange County today and Sheriff James A. Musick said water behind two dams will be dragged.

While the search by hundreds of volunteers, marines, sheriff's deputies and Boy Scouts went on, the ceaseless questioning of Henry Ford McCracken, held on suspicion of kidnapping, continued.

Sheriff Musick, former University of Southern California football player, returned last night from Klamath Falls, Ore., where he had taken a prisoner, and took over personal direction of the investigation.

The pigtailed Patricia disappeared after attending a double-feature movie matinee last Saturday. McCracken, 34, a guitar player and handyman, has admitted he attended the same movie. But he has denied assertions by witnesses that he left the theater in nearby Buena Park with the child and took her to his auto court cabin.

302,000 Americans In Europe Last Year

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—Some 302,000 Americans went to Europe last year on an average two month trip and they spent $225,000,000 for transportation, fun, food, sights and lodging.

The department of commerce, reporting these figures, said it was the second biggest traveling year for Americans, with the Korean war hardly even slowing the movement.

Easier To Tell How Than Follow Advice

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., May 23—(AP)—Police Sgt. Dick Runyan would like to change his luck. If that fails he'd like to change his title in the department.

Not long ago, his thumb was slashed by a power saw. The next day the same saw did the same thing to his middle finger left hand.

Yesterday, he felt something brush his leg. He grabbed for it. It was an electric fan that 'slit the nail and side of his middle finger, right hand.

Runyan's title is chief of the accident prevention bureau.

Oil Threatens World Peace

TEHRAN, Iran, May 23—(AP)—Tension mounted today in crisis-torn Tehran after some 30,000 Moslems-booming the United States and Britain -- vowed yesterday to wage holy war if need be to nationalize the nation's rich oil resources.

An air of crisis gripped the Iranian capital as police and troops, on a 24-hour alert, patrolled the streets in trucks and on horseback. A dozen tanks roamed the city, ready for action.

A resolution declaring "strong hatred" of the United States and Britain was cheered wildly at yesterday's mass rally, called by Moslem religious leaders and Premier Mohammed Mossadegh's national bloc.

The cheering reached fever pitch when black-bearded Chams Ghanatabadi, leader of the militant Mujaheddin Islam (fighters for Islam), declared:

"All loyal Moslems will throw the British bandits into the Persian Gulf, if they do not leave the country."

Thousands of Moslem religious banners were waved in approval when another speaker, parliament member Hossein Makki, declared a recent statement by the U. S. State Department was "a stab in the back of the Iranian nation."

The State Department, which has urged moderation on both sides of the dispute, has been accused by Iranians of backing the British stand against nationalization.

Makki is Mossadegh's right hand man in parliament and secretary of the joint Senate-Majlis Oil Nationalization Board.

The rally--called by Ayatullah Seyed Abolghassem Kashani, one of Iran's leading priests--was the latest move to step up pressure against any British resistance to government seizure of the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Company.

The law nationalizing the giant firm was enacted more than three weeks ago, but the government has given no practical hint of how it intends to carry it out.

Commie Drive Put in Reverse All along Front

Enemy Forces Split Up and Flee To Hills to Escape

By OLEN CLEMENTS

TOKYO, Thursday, May 24—(AP)—Communist troops retreated all along the 100-mile Korean front Wednesday, hotly pursued by aggressive Allied tanks and infantry.

Allied gains of more than 15 miles were racked up, some units were a scant four miles from parallel 38, and at least two good road centers were recaptured.

The entire U. S. Tenth Corps went over to the attack in mountainous east-central Korea. Here the fifth Red offensive earlier this week was threatening to break through and outflank the Allied center.

The Tenth lopped off the tip of this spearhead, gained up to three and a half miles, and overran the road center of Hangey, U. S. Marines, the Second Infantry Division and unidentified units loosed this attack.

In west-central Korea, one U. S. tank column in a 15-mile dash rammed into Kapyong, 35 miles northeast of Seoul. A Red division in front of them dissolved into small groups and filtered north to escape deadly air strikes.

On the eastern front, Allied forces splashing through rugged mountains cut off the spearhead of the last Red offensive force of their second spring drive. The Allies seized a key pass on the Communist supply route to Chinese troops fighting 25 miles south of the Red Korean border for control of the main trans-Korean highway in that area. Some Red troops were pulling back in that area.

In the far west, South Korean troops pushed within four miles of the Red Korean border.

The valiant U. S. Second Division led Wednesday's big UN counter-attack across 20 miles of the east-central front.

Tanks led American infantrymen back into Hangey, key highway junction, 13 miles south of the border.

Chinese 'Take Beating'

The tanks and doughboys drove into shattered Chinese remnants after planes and massed artillery paved the way with a tree-shattering bombardment. Red forces withdrew. Small Communist forces fought delaying actions to cover the retreat.

Lt. Gen. Edward M. Almond, 10th Corps commander who ordered the counterattack, said "has made excellent progress." He said the Chinese took "such a beating on our front" they are "being forced to withdraw."

The Red retreat was more rapid on the adjoining west-central sector. Advancing American tanks and infantrymen reported little opposition.

Attacking Leathernecks rescued six wounded Americans who had lived through six nightmarish days in a little valley Chinese had turned into a scene of death.

American dead lay there, too. The body of one doughboy lay face down in a paddy field beside a large shell hole. Beside his bloody hand was a small Bible, soaked by Tuesday night's rain. Beside his head were photographs blasted from his billboard--of a small baby and a young woman with long dark hair and smiling eyes.

Survivors said the Chinese had taken the walking wounded with them.

Congress Committee To Come to Ohio in Fall

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—It probably will be September or October before a House subcommittee visits Ohio to study the re-districting problem.

The subcommittee is working on a bill to compel states to reshuffle their congressional districts according to a formula. A bill to shift the Ohio districts has passed the Ohio House and has been sent to the Senate.

Little Things Can Cause Fires With Big Losses, Chief Warns

A hot iron which had been left connected caused considerable damage to clothing and personal belongings at the Ora Bellar home, 1139 East Paint Street, Tuesday about 9:40 P. M.

Bellar discovered the fire after the other members of the family had gone up town while on the front porch of his home, he noticed smoke coming from the back part of the house.

Upon investigating, he found the back room ablaze and called the fire department.

Firemen confined the damage to the contents of the room. There was some smoke damage too.

Investigation proved that an iron, which one of the members of the family had been using, was left hooked up and had caught the ironing board on fire.

Secret Grand Jury To Make Spy Hunt

NEW YORK, May 23—(AP)—A super-secret federal grand jury, sworn in here, is expected to conduct a wide probe of spying and other subversive activities.

Communists from all over the country may be called as witnesses.

The grand jury, which began deliberations yesterday, is under special orders from Judge Henry W. Goddard emphasizing secrecy.

The instructions which Judge Goddard gave the 19 men and four women, who were sworn in Monday, gave rise to unofficial reports that they would consider matters of the utmost importance.

Wheat for India Now Seems Sure

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—Opposition to providing American grain to help feed India's hungry millions had all but dissolved today in the House, but a fight was boiling up over tying strings to the aid.

With another day of debate in sight before the main votes are taken, administration leaders exuded confidence that the bill to provide Prime Minister Nehru's people money for 2,000,000 tons of grain would be passed.

Their major worry was whether they could stave off proposals to require India to give the United States, in repayment, some strategic minerals this country needs.

Diamond Jubilee Noted by WHS Seniors Here

Sharon Rettig
Says Challenges
Face Class of '51

The 94 graduating seniors at Washington C. H. High School were told here Tuesday night by their president, Sharon Lee Rettig, that they face challenges in the years ahead which can become opportunities.

Her remarks were addressed to seniors, who formed a giant diamond on a rectangle in observance of the 75th Commencement season at WHS. The occasion was the annual Class Night in the WHS auditorium.

Miss Rettig, who has already enrolled in the Mt. Carmel School of Nursing, told an audience which almost filled the downstairs of the auditorium:

"We the diamond jubilee class are about to be on our own, and if we are wise we'll survey the whole perspective before we dash headlong into anything. We will take time and be safe rather than rush in and be sorry," she declared.

Looking into those years ahead was Isaac Bennett, dressed as a tramp, going around finding out what members of the class were doing in 1960. He read the class prophecy.

The class history was read by Richard Eckle and the class will be by David Sheidier.

A clarinet trio, consisting of William E. Case, Audree Jean Scholl and Eloise Ann James, presented, "Where My Caravan Has Rested."

Charles Dee Smith played a saxophone solo entitled, "Peppercino, Concert Caprice."

Miss Rettig delivered the president's farewell address to the seniors, who followed by singing the alma mater. The organist and accompanist was Helen Louise Hynes.

After the class night a dance was held at the WHS gym, which was decorated with an appropriate theme for the occasion. Many parents watched from the balcony.

Korean Casualty On Way Home to Fayette County

The body of the second Fayette County youth killed in action has arrived in San Francisco and is enroute home.

His was one of 420 bodies of Americans who were returned on board the U. S. S. Bartlesville Victory.

Pfc. Curry's father died when he was only two years old. He was born in Washington C. H. but was reared in Jonesboro, located just west of here.

The first Korean war casualty to be returned for burial in Fayette County was Pfc. Charles W. Boggs. He was buried in the White Oak Cemetery April 29.

Castor oil is an important raw material in making paints, varnishes, lubricants, and nylon.

Mickle Named As Fire Chief

Lawrence Mickle has been named by volunteers as chief of the Bloomingburg fire department, which serves the corporation of Bloomingburg and Marion and Paint townships.

The volunteers selected him at a training session held Tuesday night in the Bloomingburg Town Hall.

Volunteers are making an inspection in the Bloomingburg area locating all available sources of water and distances of the water supplies from buildings and quantity of water during various seasons.

They are also in the process of zoning the district which is served by the fire department.

Announcement was made by the fire department volunteers that they cannot put out fires outside their area, even if the burning buildings are just across the line. The Ohio Inspection Bureau has informed the fire department that its volunteers would be personally liable should fire break out in their own area when they are outside the area fighting fires.

Financial Market

NEW YORK, May 23—(P)—Stocks seen-sawed between plus and minus today in a quiet market.

A mixed start, a mid-morning sag ging tendency, a pick-up about noon—that was the story of the market's narrow movement.

The rails stood ahead along with steels. Motors held unchanged for considerable periods. The remainder of the market was irregular.

It is estimated that 20 percent of the nation's steel and 30 percent of its pig iron are made in Pennsylvania, mostly in the industrial western section of the state.

The Nation Today

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON, May 23—(P)—Your pocketbook -- the price you pay for things you buy -- may benefit from a supreme court decision yesterday.

It means a lot of shopkeepers can now charge you less than they've been charging. They'll be free to cut prices.

This court decision involves the Fair Trade laws of the 45 states which have them. Three states--Vermont, Missouri, Texas -- and The District of Columbia don't have them.

This is what those Fair Trade laws meant, among other things:

1. The manufacturer of a brand-name product could go into a state and make an agreement with one or more retailers, handling his product, now to sell it below a certain minimum price. This was price fixing.

2. Once a manufacturer made such an agreement -- if only with one retailer in that state--no other retailer there could sell below the price agreed upon by the manufacturer and that one dealer.

This meant that any dealer -- or many dealers--who not only didn't sign the agreement but didn't want it at all, couldn't cut the price of that product.

This was the way it was until yesterday, as the state laws were interpreted. But the supreme court changed that in part and in this way:

The court said that in states which have Fair Trade laws a manufacturer and a retailer can still make agreements not to sell below a certain price.

But, the court said, this applies in the future only to those making the agreement and, in the future, any retailer not a party to the agreement can cut the price as much as he wishes.

Here's a homely example of how that worked and can work now:

1. The manufacturer of a fishing reel wanted it to sell for $15

if you bought it from a tackle shop.

If he sold it to a tackle dealer in the District of Columbia, which has no fair trade law, that dealer could re-sell it to you for any price he wished below $15. He suited himself on that. That still stands. The supreme court decision doesn't change that.

2. But say the same manufacturer went into a state with a fair trade law. He made a deal with a tackle shop not to re-sell that reel for less than $15.

Even though the manufacturer made that agreement with only one tackle shop, all the other dealers who handled that same reel had to sell it for no less than $15, even though they took no part in the agreement.

Now, under the court decision, the manufacturer still can make an agreement in a fair trade state with as many dealers who are willing to go along with him that the reel shall not be sold for less than $15.

But, from now on, any dealer handling that reel--if he didn't take part in the agreement--can sell the reel for any price he wishes below $15.

This decision resulted from a case in Louisiana, which has a fair trade law.

Two distillery corporations, Schenley and Calvert, wanted a certain New Orleans liquor store --Schwegmann Brothers -- not to sell below a certain price. The store insisted on selling at a lower price.

The distillery firms took the liquor store to court to make the owners abide by the state's fair trade law. The Schwegmann firm fought this all the way up to the supreme court.

And yesterday the court cut a big hole in the fair trade laws of all the states by ruling in Schwegmann's favor.

Of course, a question arises here: what happens now? Won't firms refuse to sell to retailers who decline to take part in a price-fixing agreement?

In some cases, probably. May be not. One lawyer here, asked about it, said: "That won't work very well. Retailers can get their

Rev. Braden To Attend Presbyterian Assembly

Rev. Harold J. Braden, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, has made plans to attend sessions of the 163rd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. goods from a lot of sources, such as wholesalers, if a manufacturer doesn't want to deal with them."

he and Mrs. Blinn had taken on a trip to Europe and into Egypt.

His running comments and explanation of various scenes, buildings and monuments, proved entertaining as well as interesting during his showing of the pictures.

In the absence of William Clift, club song leader, Belford Carpenter was called upon to direct in the club singing.

Dick Blessing, outgoing student-guest of the club, from Washington High School, thanked Rotarians for his period of membership and expressed appreciation for the opportunity.

Red Cross Seeks 160 Blood Donors

Volunteer workers are making a determined effort to obtain 160 blood donors for the next visit of the Red Cross bloodmobile unit to this city May 31.

Tom Mark, chairman of the blood program, said if 160 donors show up at least 125 pints of blood should be obtained.

A large part of the blood donated here will be shipped to American fighting men in Korea.

Response from the rural areas was heavy last time, according to W. W. Montgomery, county agent, who has charge of the blood program outside the city.

Catalogues of auction sales of important book collections often become collectors' items in themselves. A priced catalogue of the Jerome Kern sale, which realized almost $2,000,000, is a prized item for bookmen.

Progress Made On Route 70

Patches Are Put Over Rough Spots

Motorists who travel chopped up Route 70 each day will be able to ride a little more comfortably in another couple of weeks.

The reason -- bad spots which appeared during the bitter winter are being patched by the Blue Rock Quarry and the G. D. Baker and Son Co. The highway department maintenance crews are digging out the bad places.

A spokesman for the highway maintenance crews said the patching should be completed within a couple of weeks, with the south end of highway to be finished by the end of the week.

Blue Rock is working on the south end while G. D. Baker and Son Co. has the contract to repair the north end of the road.

G. D. Baker and Son also have jobs to take care of on Routes 729 and 734.

Several accidents occurred on Route 70 following its break-up during the winter.

Blood May Buy Time But Waste Goes On

Thousands of mothers and other relatives of boys now entering military service, or who already are in, find little comfort in the present national administration's statements that the country is buying time with American blood in the Korean war while it builds its strength to a point where it need not fear attack.

It is no happy thought that the cost of this time is the blood of American soldiers fighting in Korea under a handicap set up by officials and generals in Washington, entirely comfortable in their big cushioned chairs, who say that other protective measures to stop Chinese attacks must not be used; might make somebody mad if we stopped them by bombing their Manchurian supply bases.

Only six years ago the United States was the strongest military power in the world. Then came a demobilization program which developed into almost a frenzy. Weapons of war were distributed throughout the world with a lavish hand. Russia was one of the principal beneficiaries. Great accumulations of war materials were permitted to rust away, until almost the last American gun was in alien hands or destroyed entirely.

Now the administration responsible for all this is "buying time" with American blood. A futile administration has repudiated the men whose knowledge of the real danger could have been of incalculable benefit to the nation.

Meantime—while the administration is prodding industry to produce more of the necessities of war there comes from Germany a story of waste which is almost unbelievable.

Marcel Wallenstein, American reporter, writing from Frankfurt, Germany, reveals what happened to the $34,000,000,000 in war equipment owned by the U. S. government, which was scattered about Europe when the war ended. Much of the equipment was new. All of it was immediately declared surplus.

Nearly all of it went to an Englishman named George Dawson, the transactions being handled on this side by John Maragon, a White House hanger-on from Kansas City. Dawson bought trucks, jeeps and other vehicles at prices ranging from $10 to $100, the average being approximately $50.

Some were shipped back to the United States. Large numbers were sold to Russia to become part of the Soviet's war potential. Included in the raid on the American taxpayers were vast quantities of tractors, bulldozers, uniforms, medical supplies, even food.

Wallenstein says the waste continues. That American forces of occupation in Germany live like royalty. German people get the impression there is no limit to American wealth.

The U. S. economy is being strained to prepare for another war, a war for which the nation was prepared, only to have its substance wasted through political graft.

Thirty-four billion dollars to the corruption and the grafters, every dime of which came from the pockets of the American people, is a high price to pay for what our federal administration says is our lack of preparedness. What kind of inept management is this, anyway?

Pinch of New Taxes

As the House Ways and Means Committee nears completion of the new tax bill, the levies decided on indicate that the belt tightening on personal spending is going to pinch hard in many places. Besides higher individual income taxes, excise taxes or --more properly speaking-- sales taxes will be increased and extended. Neither may the consumer expect to escape feeling the effect of higher corporation taxes, despite price control.

An old timer is one who can remember when America's foreign policy consisted of marrying heiresses to impecunious foreign nobles.

Diet and Health Surgeons Prepared For This Emergency

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

It is rare indeed for a patient's heart to stop beating during an operation. Unfortunately, however, this emergency does sometimes occur. It is the gravest a surgeon can encounter, and one which must be met by swift and skillful action.

Best insurance against it is an alert anesthetist who can often note what is happening at its very onset. Sometimes, however, no untoward signs are observed until the surgeon working over the operating field sees that the blood has turned much darker in color. This may be the first sign that there is need for fast intervention.

Active Treatment

Today's surgeons recognize the possibility of this condition and so are prepared to give active treatment at once. Promptness is of utmost importance since it is believed that irreversible damage to the brain cells occurs if treatment is delayed beyond three minutes. Nerve cells die when deprived of sufficient blood even for this length of time and, unlike cells in many other parts of the body, they have no power for regrowth. Therefore, the surgeon is working against an important time factor in trying to save the patient before the nerve tissue is permanently damaged. When this damage does occur, the patient may have a permanent paralysis, or be left with some other serious handicap.

The surgeon must determine whether the heart is still beating or twitching. If he is working in the abdomen at the time, he must reach the heart by the most convenient route he can find.

Although the heart may be stimulated by squeezing it through the abdomen, five times as much blood flow may be obtained by directly squeezing the organ between the thumb in front and the fingers from behind. The surgeon does not hesitate to open up the diaphragm, which is the muscle partition between the chest and the abdominal cavity. If he chooses, he may, instead, rapidly enter the chest through the chest wall itself. The most efficient method of massage is 120 compressions of the heart a minute by the surgeon's hands. Good hospitals have an emergency kit available at all times to carry out these procedures.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
M. K.: I have spots before my left eye. Could you tell me the cause of this? I am wearing glasses, but they do not seem to help.

Answer: Spots before the eyes are a symptom that appears in several diseases. It may be due to constipation, to a defect in the vision, to anemia, to high blood pressure, or to migraine.

A thorough examination is necessary before the exact cause can be determined; then proper treatment can be suggested.

Portrait of American Midwest

By Hal Boyle

SOUTH BEND, Ind. —(P)—The mighty American midwest never looked better than it does today.

This heartland of the United States is particularly lovely now to one visiting it from New York.

A big city is at its glittery best in the winter. It is bright and alive when the land that feeds it is dull and dour in an icicle hibernation. But the countryside sells itself in the lush warmth that comes as spring blends into summer.

You ride across the big wide midwest now and the colors of earth and sky and bird assail your senses with almost a painful violence.

Was there ever a better time to be alive since the seas withdrew and a hot sun shone down on the steaming earth and told the trees to grow? Was this world ever fairer to see than it is right now?

Maybe it looked fresher and finer to the dinosaur or the mastodon, when the universe was younger. But the dinosaurs are fossils, and summer keeps right on coming forever, and a man has to buy life in his own time. And now is the time to buy life.

Everything in the midwest these May days looks as new and polished as if the hills and fields and town were on dress parade, waiting for the Lord to drop by and inspect it.

So peaceful... so green... so lasting-seeming... as happy-looking as a young girl coming home from church.

Old folks, whose only goal was to outlive the winter, thaw their bones in front porch rockers and think, "Well, darned if I intend to give up and die on as nice a day as this."

Cowls frolic in the pasture and wonder why their placid mothers would rather nuzzle the ground than outrace the wind as it makes breeze ripples across the grass. Robins are feathered millionaires. They plop heavily after plows churning up the black soil and ponder, "Shall I snap up that worm—or is it fat enough to bother with?"

Everything is busy and more contented—insects and men, cows and possums. Everything is planting or building or nesting or painting or dreaming or courting.

In the cities the young couples linger longer together over late date sandwiches in the corner cafe. And they walk the long way home, Joe, the jeweler, puts a big display of diamond engagement rings in his window.

Somewhere else in the world there are battles and famines and epidemics and people plotting over who's to be king. But in the American midwest right now it's growing time, the season of reaching for something better.

This time... this season... these very days... millions of midwest people will remember for giving them the most wonderful moments of their lives. Peace is so close at heart you forget the war.

Gen. Bradley's Ideals and Silence

By George Sokolsky

It is obvious that it is the administration's policy to talk the MacArthur hearings to death. Somebody used the word, obfuscate, to describe their tactics, meaning to deprive of mental clearness. General Marshall's 200,000 words shed no light; General Omar Bradley's testimony, thus far, added little to our information except that military men are trained not to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

On this subject, General Bradley had much to say that cannot be misunderstood. Senator Bridges asked him:

"Q--If it reaches the time in this country where you think the political decision is affecting what you believe to be basically right militarily, what would you do?"

"A--Well, if after several instances in which the best military advice we could give was turned down for other reasons, I would decide that my advice was no longer of any help, why, I would quit. I feel that is the way you would have to do. Let them get some other military adviser whose advice apparently would be better, or at least more acceptable.

"Q--Would you speak out, tell the American public? A--No, sir."

Senator Bridges pursued this line of questioning and all of it is important.

"Q--Don't you think that is your duty, your loyalty to your country, to do that? A--No, sir, I don't think so. I have been brought up a little differently.

"Q--Where does the loyalty to your country come in? A--[I am loyal to my country, but I am also loyal to the constitution, and you have certain elected officials under the constitution, and I wouldn't profess that my judgment was better than the president of the United States or the administration.

"Q--Would it not be on a military subject? A--Yes.

"Q--Should not you speak out? A--I would, yes, to the constituted authorities; yes.

"Q--But you would stop there? A--Yes."

Senator Wiley asked General Bradley a question pertinent to the investigation -- an important question in a hearing especially called so that the people might know the truth regarding the conference to dismiss MacArthur. This is the colloquy:

"Q--I beg your pardon. You said there was Marshall, Acheson --and who else? A--Harriman and myself.

"Q--All right. Now, tell us what was said then? A--Senator, at that time I was in a position of a confidential adviser to the president. I do not feel at liberty to publicize what any of us said at that time."

If you or I took that position, we should be cited for contempt. Dr. Edward A. Rumely has been convicted for taking precisely that position. The committee has voted to forgive General Bradley his recalcitrance and public opinion, on the whole, supports that position. But we need to know that two precedents have been established:

1. That military men are not the same kind of citizens; that there is one rule for them and one for the rest of us;

2. That it is not necessary to speak the whole truth before a congressional committee; that a citizen has option as to the kind of truth he may choose to tell.

(In this connection it is interesting to read Donald Dawson's testimony. He also dodges.)

As Senator Knowland so correctly said: "This deals with the public business of the government of the United States." President Harry Truman is only part of that government; the Congress is an equal part. General Bradley's responsibility is as great to Congress as it is to the president.

I should like to put it all in the form of a hypothetical question: Suppose the president of the United States ordered the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff to seize the Congress, arrest the minority leaders and declare a dictatorship -- what would be the responsibility of the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff?

Perhaps General Bradley would like to answer that. Senator Connally understood that when he said:

"I do not think it would be appropriate for the general to speak to the president and then come back and tell us what the president decided about a purely procedural matter before this committee."

"It is not the business of the president, and I don't think that we ought to establish any such doctrine for similar cases, that we run over and talk to the White House and get the president's opinion."

This is not a question of General Bradley or Donald Dawson; it is a matter of government.

5 War Criminals Facing Execution

WASHINGTON, May 23—(P)—The State Department yesterday told John J. McCoy, U. S. high commissioner for Germany, he is free to proceed with the execution of five Germans convicted of war crimes.

The supreme court has refused to review the cases of the last seven remaining German war criminals under death sentences. A federal district court here yesterday issued a final order dismissing their petitions.

The State Department said it had jurisdiction over only five of the seven, the other two being under jurisdiction of the defense department.

Favoritism Shown Executives In Preferential Stock-buying Plan, Is Claim in Controversy

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK, May 23 —(AP)—The marked trend toward letting certain corporation executives buy stock from the company on better terms than they might be able to get in the open market has provided some of the bigger and better stockholder — m a n a g e m e n t fights this year.

The details are called stock option incentive plans. The incentive part of the plan is based on the idea that as a part owner the executive will be interested in making the most money possible for the company. The trend toward these plans is away from the practice in other years of giving either pay increases or bonuses to top men.

Opposing stockholders say the real idea isn't "incentive" at all, but merely a scheme to get around the steadily increasing personal income tax rates, and that it gives certain chosen men a chance "to make millions," a chance others don't get.

A fairly typical stock option plan is the one just passed, after much debate, at the U. S. Steel Co. annual meeting. It provides that chosen key management employees may buy stock from the company treasury at the market price on the day the executive is granted the right to buy. But he has up to 10 years in which to buy the stock—and he may exercise his option up to three years after retirement.

Income Tax Evaded
The present federal tax laws provide that two years after the option is granted and six months after the stock is actually paid for, the executive may sell that stock without paying the regular income tax rates. Instead, any profit can be listed as long-term capital gain, or any loss is long-term capital loss.

Under this plan, or under others like it throughout industry, an executive granted the right today to buy 100 shares at today's price may find two years from now that the market price has gone up $10 a share, he can buy it then, still at today's price, and make $1,000 on the deal by selling the next day. But if he waits six months more, the $1,000 is subject only to a 25 per cent capital gains tax and he hasn't been pushed up into a thousand dollar higher personal income tax bracket, as he would have if the company had given him $1,000 in raise or bonus.

Arguments for the stock option incentive plan are these:

By making it easy and profitable for top executives to buy stock in the company, they are induced to feel like partners in the firm. Thus their own interest is served in helping the company prosper.

Executive Shortage
Many companies fear the growing shortage of top executive material as demand exceeds the supply of A-1 men. The stock option plan, with its tax benefits, makes it easier to compete with other firms for new personnel. Also, as Republic Steel pointed out at the annual meeting this week, it makes it easier to keep top personnel from leaving. Raises and bonuses aren't as attractive, because of the high income tax. And outright gifts of stock come under a gift tax and lose much of their value.

Against this, some stockholders have asked how much incentive actually is provided—will the executive really hold the stock? A stockholder at the Radio Corporation of America annual meeting said that the executives "may make millions if the stock goes up—and they have no commitment if the stock does down."

SCHEDULE CHANGE
Roller Derby telecasting on ABC-TV ends another season with Thursday night's pickup from Washington. The second annual Madison Square Garden games for May 26 to June 2, which derby spokesmen list as their "World Series," will not be put on the air.

Last year some of the Garden contests went on ABC-TV, but since then there has been realignment of rights to telecasting of Garden events. With NBC-TV, CBS-TV and DuMont participating in the arrangement. Since the Garden rights deal, transfer of the Garden derby to another network is remote.

To fill in the late night periods between now and start of another roller season, ABC-TV is putting films from New York on the network for Tuesday and Thursday nights and girls' basketball from Chicago on Saturday nights.

The girls are members of the Queens of America, one of the six teams in the National Professional Women's League. They play regulation baseball except that they use a smaller diamond. Pat Flanagan, Chicago sportscaster, will do the announcing.

Gene Lockhart and daughter Jean, who teamed up for "The House of Seven Gables" in the Robert Montgomery Theater on NBC-TV, this week, will be back again for the starring roles in the next play June 4. This will be "For Love or Money," in which they played on Broadway and for which as many members of the original cast as possible will be used.

Prize fight broadcasting from Madison Square Garden—radio on ABC and television on NBC-TV—is to close for the season June 2, according to the advance schedules. The sponsor (Gillette) is going off for the summer, with fall plans not yet announced. Among the concluding events is this week's lightweight championship bout between the Williams and James Carter.

Sixty-five Young Couples Enjoy Class Night Dance

Soft lights and low music set the tempo for the Class Night Dance held in the Washington High School gymnasium Tuesday night. Approximately sixty-five couples whirled away the evening until a late hour to the strains of Bob Martin's band from Urbana.

Red and silver paper streamers were used effectively in decoration, festooned in garlands along the sides of the ballroom. Tables were placed congenially around the edge of the dance floor and a huge silver ball revolved from the center of the ceiling, reflecting tiny lights. A wishing well was an added feature placed at one end of the room. The committee responsible for these attractive decorations was composed of Shirley Pyle, Wendell Braden, Eddie Peryll, Roddy Beaver, Loretta Jones, Ike Bennett, Shirley Hard and Donna Brandon.

At the intermission, a delightful program of songs and entertainment provided color to the party. Joe Burke, master of ceremonies, introduced Dixie Lee Ellison who sang "Lover"; the "Harmony Kings", Bud Dawson, Bill Humphries, Dean Wickens and Jimmy Michaels; Roddy Beaver, who gave a monologue; and an octette composed of Sharon Rettig, Jean Perrill, Helen Hynes, Jean Scholl, Wendy Braden, Ellis Miller, Kenny Robinette and Bucky Smith who harmonized on "When You and I Were Young, Maggie, Blues".

Horns and favors were given out during the grand march, led by the class president, Sharon Rettig and Ted Shelton. The lovely young girls in their dainty pastel-hued dresses, on the arms of their handsome escorts, in summer evening jackets presented a picture of youth and beauty and gaiety.

A refreshment stand where Tut Jackson presided over the punch and snacks, was an enjoyable feature. Miss Jean Perrill was chairman of this committee.

Miss Kathleen Davis and Mr. William Clift, Jr., the senior class sponsors, were a constant help in making the dance the success it was. Many members of the faculty were present to enjoy the dancing and mingle with the young people.

Out-of-town guests for the dance included Judy Rost, of Columbus and Elizabeth Otis, of Evanston, Illinois.

May Meeting; Garden Club

Sixteen members and one guest were present when the Buckeye Garden Club held its May meeting at the home of Miss Catherine Gossard.

The president, Mrs. Lucille Creath, called the meeting to order with the singing of the club hymn, "In The Garden," and the reading of the club pledge. The usual reports were read. Roll call was answered with our "most used garden tools" and the hint for the month was to dis-bud peonies. The president appointed committees to have charge of the flowers around the fountain at the Bloomingburg Cemetery, and invitations were read from the Washington Club and Commercial Point Club to their flower shows. Six members were selected by the club to go to the County Workshop held June 7th at the Co-op auditorium in this city.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Hazel Moyer and gave enlightening facts about lawn care. A plant sale was held, after which the meeting was brought

The Record-Herald, Wednesday, May 23, 1951
Washington, D. C., Ohio

Service Guild Holds Meeting And Initiation

The meeting of the Wesleyan Service Guild was held in Fellowship Hall on Monday evening.

Miss Jeanette Haver, president, conducted the business session at which various reports were given and an announcement made that Mabel Ruth Nowlin, the Guild missionary to China, would speak in Columbus on May 29th. Plans are underway for a number of people from here to attend.

Miss Vera Bowman led the devotionals which centered around the theme of "Cooperation." Mrs. Anna Creamer made some interesting observations by comparing the women's place in public life in the past seventy years. Her talk was entitled, "Changing Patterns For Women, Their Work and Health."

Miss Edith Wilson officiated at the installation of officers for the coming year in a lovely candle-lighter service. Those installed were Miss Rosamond Burris, president; Miss Jeanette Haver, vice president; Mrs. Paul Haines, recording secretary; Miss Marian Christopher, promotion secretary; Mrs. Marie Williams, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Horney, spiritual life secretary; Miss Vera Bowman, Christian Social Relations secretary; and Mrs. Orris Winter, supply secretary.

In the social hour which followed, delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. William Theobald, and her assistants, Miss Lillie Henkle, Dr. Ruth Teeters, Mrs. N. M. Reiff, Mrs. A. D. Woodmansee, Miss Valaska Rinehart, Mrs. Anna Creamer, Miss Gertrude Ford, Mrs. Urcel Hays and Mrs. Elfreda Tomba.

Breakfast Fetes Birthday of Natalie McLean

Mrs. Gene McLean entertained on Tuesday with a birthday breakfast at her home in Millledgeville, honoring her twelve-year-old daughter, Natalie.

Covers were laid for sixteen at one large and one small table. Pretty favors graced each place and lovely watergardens of spring flowers added color and beauty to the scene. The pretty honor guest looked cool and crisp in a navy blue dotted swiss sheer dress, with a corsage of pink roses, the gift of her grandmother and aunt.

Before the breakfast, games and contests were enjoyed. The contest winners were Joan Jacobs and Ruth Ann Sheeley. At the close of the breakfast, Natalie opened her many gifts and made appropriate responses. Mrs. Floy Ferguson, the grandmother, and Miss Fern Fichthorn, an aunt, joined the party later in the morning.

Those enjoying the gay affair were: Mary Jo Mintern, Judy Blair, Cathy Allen, Carolyn Crago, Carolyn Gault, Joan Jacobs, Evelyn Hiser, Dorothy Anderson, Nona Hodson, Donna and Barbara Ratcliff, Lulu Belle Wheeler and Sandra Kelley.

Much Talent Is Evidenced at Spring Recital

Lovely spring flowers provided an appropriate background Tuesday evening at the Presbyterian Church when the pupils of Mrs. Marian Gage, Miss Mazie Kessler and Mrs. Amanda Paxson presented a program of delightful numbers for an audience of relatives and friends at eight o'clock.

The well chosen and diversified numbers were as follows:

Duet, "Oh Susanna", by Janet Ellis and Carolyn Willis; "The Shoemaker's Shop" by Dale Edward Wilson; "The Fairies Harp", by Buddy Lynch; "March of the Wee Folk", by Jimmy Kirk; Two numbers, "Flying Kites" and "Stepping Stones" by Duane Callender; "Marketing" by Janet Ritter; Violin duet, "Finiculi-Finicula", by Darrell Hunter and Tommy Mann; Two numbers, "Bell Song" and "Climbing" by Janet Storer; Two numbers, "A Bird Comes Flying Home" and "Captain Kidd" by Henry Roszmann; "Little Spring Song" by Peter Hayes; Duet "The Old Time Fiddler" by Peter Hayes and Mrs. Gage; "The Katydid and the Cricket" by Gary Riegel; "Minuet" and "The Happy Clown" by Mary Ann Donohoe; Duet "Beautiful Heaven" by Janet Ellis and Carolyn Willis; "Parade of the Penguins" by Janet Ellis; "In a Gypsy Camp" and "By the Fountain", by Ronnie Coffman; Voice "A Perfect Day" and "Smilin' Through" by Jay Bolton; "Dancing Raindrops" by Linda Storer.

"In a Tent" and "Country Gardens" by Ronny Whitaker; "Call of the Old Drum" and "The Mill" by Paulette Pennington; "The Drum Major" by Larry Barker; "Malaguena" by Virginia Rodgers; "Puck's Dance Grotesque" by Larry Schiller; "Andante" from the "Surprise Symphony" and "Washington Post March" by Charles Hire; "Serenade" by Joseph Gardner; Violin "Crimson Blushes" by Tommy Mann; "Three Blind Mice"—Theme and Variations by Coralea Smith; Voice "The Beautiful Blue Danube" by Carolyn Merritt; "Narcissus" by Marilyn Parrett; "Gollywog's Cake Walk" by Diana Everhart; Duet "On the Trail" by Diana Everhart and Mrs. Gage.

Theodore Roosevelt, in spite of his many other activities, also was one of the most prolific writers in American letters. His bibliography runs to 5,000 items.

Picnic Supper Monday Evening

An enjoyable picnic was held at the attractive country home of the Willard Storrs Tuesday evening, honoring their house guest, Mrs. Frank Bennett of Circleville.

Ten guests enjoyed a delicious fried chicken supper and spirited games of bridge and canasta during the evening.

Present with the hosts and honor guest were: Mr. and Mrs. Ray Maynard, Mrs. W. W. Westerfield, Mrs. Morrison Ball, Mrs. Albert Glascoe, Mrs. Leota McLean, Mrs. W. S. Willis and Mrs. L. L. Brock.

Fix Your Hair To Suit Mood

Six delightful hairdos can be yours, if you get a good basic haircut, says Hairdresser Albert of Fifth Avenue.

Albert believes women can look younger or older, sweeter or more sophisticated, and emphasize their most attractive features just by varying the manner in which they comb their hair. Much of the secret lies in the angle of the part, according to Albert.

He advises that you get a good basic haircut which can be combed and twirled any way you see fit. Different parts and different ways of grouping eye-catching curls can accent features and bring out a personality the woman herself may not have known was there.

Albert did a bit of experimenting at his New York salon by combing the hair of glamorous model Stacia Koe into ten different coiffures. Stacia looked different in all of them.

He emphasized her nicely shaped head and good facial contours by arranging her locks in a sleek cap-cut. A diagonal part gave her face a rounded contour, framing it with baby curls for a chic, young and gay look.

Softer in mood and emphasis is the side-parted little girl coiffure which focuses attention on mouth and chin. Here the hair is left almost straight to show off its natural beauty, except for a high cluster of curls.

For eye appeal there is nothing like bangs, says Albert. He advises a ladylike coiffure with a center part and swirled bang. The center part is a sure way to attract attention to the eyes, eyebrows and hairline, says he.

If your ears are particularly attractive, emphasize them by using a horizontal part with curls in front of each ear.

Albert, who is style director of the Hair Fashion Council of America, thinks the new 3-to-4-inch hair length is perfect as it lends itself to so many different styles.

It is believed that the cuckoo could not continue to survive as a species unless it placed its eggs in the nests of other birds to be hatched. Largest of the insectivorous birds, it needs so much food that it must spend most of its time hunting it and probably could not live if it tried to incubate its own eggs.

Who Killed Giuliano? Big Question in Italy

By JAMES M. LONG
ROME, May 23 — (AP) — The Italian parliament is asking a new version of the old question: "who killed Cock Robin?" Members of the Chamber of Deputies demanded that Interior Minister Mario Scelba make known "the truth" about the slaying of the Robin Hood of Sicily, Salvatore Giuliano.

His name had become a legend by the time he was shot to death at the age of 28 in a mountain village hideout at dawn last July 5.

In seven years of outlawry Giuliano and his gang led 2,000 special police a will-o-the-wisp chase during which Carabinieri, 22 local police and eight soldiers were killed.

Between police battles and hold-ups, Giuliano declared war on the Italian republic, offered to annex Sicily to the United States and challenged government leaders to duels.

When he was shot, the interior ministry announced that he was mowed down by the special Carabinieri force which had hunted him. Col. Ugo Luca, who commanded the force, was said to have "personally led" the operation which ended Giuliano's bandit career. Carabinieri Captain Antonio Perenze was named as the officer who actually fired the fatal shots. Colonel Luca was recommended for promotion as general.

Not Many Convinced

Not too many Italians were convinced this version was accurate. Sicilians said Giuliano must have been betrayed and probably actually slain by members of his own band, many of them his relatives.

The bandit chief's mother, Maria Lombardo, accused Giuliano's cousin, Gaspare Pisciotta, as the killer.

Less than a month after Italian newspapers put out extras on Giuliano's death, one parliamentary committee started an investigation to determine whether Cara-binieri actually killed him -- or only took the credit for it.

That investigation was stalemated when Interior Minister Scelba, himself a Sicilian, declared flatly "the police version is completely accurate."

The question burst open again at the trial of a dozen members of Giuliano's band. On trial with the rest was the dark, dapper Pisciotta, Giuliano's cousin. His attorney read to the court a letter Pisciotta had written saying:

"I personally made an agreement with Interior Minister Scelba, and Giuliano was killed by me."

He said police had promised him certain considerations of leniency for the betrayal of his cousin.

True Facts Wanted

Angrily, Socialist and Communist deputies demanded in the chamber that Scelba give the true facts.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

SLOWLY, the smile faded from her lips. "What's that on your collar?" she said. "As if I didn't know?"

"Collar?" McGann said. "What collar?" He touched it and tried to look down. "Must be blood. I've had an eventful evening."

"Obviously. For heaven's sake, don't rub it." She led him to one side and took out a compact, powdering the mark. "One thing I draw the line at is going out with a man whose collar doesn't match my lipstick."

"I can explain everything."

"You don't have to."

"But I want to. Irma Nelson collapsed on my manly bosom and I gave her what comfort I could. It was the dearest thing to do."

"Of course," she said. She took his arm and they started down the long steps to Lexington Avenue. "We're very Joe College tonight. Where's your hat?"

"Hat?"

"Yes, hat."

"I left it on Kathleen Rogers' radiator."

"She stopped with one foot poised. 'I left it on whose what?'"

"The radiator. Kathleen Rogers'."

"To dry it, I see."

"This is wonderful," she said. "I feel flattered to think my number finally came up. Who punched you in the eye?"

"That," McGann said, "is a badge of purest courage. Received in deadly combat. From Hooker Hunyak."

"You're sure it wasn't Gypsy Rose Lee when she caught you hiding in her dressing room?"

"Word of honor. Anything else, Mr. District Attorney?"

"Only that you're wearing a lovely tie. Unusual figure, too. I gave Ronnie one just like it."

McGann assayed a light laugh. "To tell the truth, I borrowed it. Thought it went well with the eye."

"Good lord," Chary said. "On top of everything else, he's a ghoul." She faced him on the sidewalk. "It's too late to back out now. Let's start with El Morocco but please don't try to take any pandas away from anybody there."

They had two dances at El Morocco and went on to the Stork where they had three dances. In the Versailles, Chary finally smiled, and had her fortune told. At Leon & Eddie's Chary ordered scrambled eggs.

"Don't you think you'd better eat?" she asked.

"Eat?" McGann said. "Solids?" He looked pained.

"I thought it might be a good idea."

He leaned forward. "Hunger stalks the land. One-third of the nation is ill-fed and yet—and yet—you would have me snatch the scrambled eggs from the very lips of the deserving?"

For emphasis he struck the table sharply with a swizzle-stick, which broke.

"Never let it be said that a McGann violated foodless Monday. Difficult as it—"

"It's Tuesday now," Chary said. "It's a quarter after Tuesday."

She signaled the waiter. "Better make that two orders of scrambled eggs."

"I knew it was a mistake to give them the vote," McGann told the waiter.

"Yes, sir."

"Next thing you know they'll want to throw away their veils."

"I'm afraid so, sir."

He addressed the waiter's disappearing back. "They'll be painting their faces and cutting off their hair. The barber shops will be invaded. Man's last—"

"Let's dance," Chary said.

"Can I lead?" McGann asked humbly.

It was over the coffee that she said, "Look who's coming in."

He turned and peered through the low-hanging smoke, past the bar to the door. A pallid dome moved at the side of a fragile blonde as Attorney Amos Holton gallantly handed Gladys Mars to a table.

"Hey, hey," McGann said. "That's going to be a big production number."

"Won't he be angry to find you here? I mean aren't you supposed to be out following people and things like that?"

"I'm working every minute." He caught her look and added quickly, "Thinking."

"Excuse me," she said and rose, and he stood up, too. He watched the annoyed set of her back as she disappeared toward the powder room. When he went over to Holton's table, the two looked up with well-concealed pleasure.

"Hello, there," McGann said genially. "Small Fifty-Second Street."

"How'd do," Gladys Mars said.

"Ah, McGann," Holton said, without rising. His face was expressionless. "I don't wish to discuss business here but I'd like to see you in the morning. I have been in touch this evening with Inspector O'Callahan and he expects shortly to clear up this entire unfortunate affair."

"Marvelous," McGann said. "Mrs. O'Callahan is bound to be pleased. Meanwhile, though, there's one thing I'd like to have."

"What's that?"

"The record Mr. Tompkins made of his will. I'd like to hear it again without so many people around."

A cloud passed over Holton's face. "I wish you had spoken earlier," he said. "Mr. Farwell asked for it to add to his collection of unique recordings. It has no legal status, you know—that's all taken care of in the written will—so I let him have it."

McGann glanced toward the powder room, then back to the table. "I'll borrow it from Frazier," he said. "Did he pick it up in person?"

"Pearson said he'd drop it off." Briefly, the lawyer explained that the former butler had been in his office discussing final details of his legacy when Farwell's telephone request had come through. "He knew Mr. Farwell, of course, and seemed anxious to do the favor."

Chary was threading her way back to the table. "Thanks," McGann said. "I'll check it."

They reached the table together and she let him push in her chair without smiling. McGann beckoned the waiter over and said, "The national debt, please." He asked her. "Like to see a disc jockey going into the stretch?"

She had seemed suddenly tired but now her interest quickened. "Frazier? Are you going to see him? Why?"

"I want to borrow something from him—that will record, to be exact." He looked at his watch.

"He should be weighing in now."

Sex Films Seized From Deaf-Mutes

CINCINNATI, May 23—(AP)—A silent crowd watched as police confiscated six sex films, a motion picture screen and a movie projector here last night—but a lot of fingers were wagging feverishly.

The raid halted the showing of reportedly obscene motion pictures by the Greater Cincinnati Silent Club, Inc., an organization of deaf mutes. The movies allegedly showed undraped women.

Three men were held without bond for investigation in the matter.

Detectives said there were some citizens with perfectly good vocal cords in the audience of 140, but that they weren't talking either.

Episcopalian Pastor Here Is Leaving City

Rev. D. J. Macdonald Is Taking Over New Columbus Pastorate

Rev. D. J. Macdonald, who for nearly seven years has been pastor of the St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in this city, is leaving next week to take charge of the pastorate of the St. John's Episcopal Church in Columbus.

His announcement of departure is meeting with regret among members of the Episcopal Church here where he has been quite successful in bringing about an improvement in the physical property of the church as well as being a staunch supporter of its spiritual values.

Rev. Macdonald came to this church in the southern Ohio Diocese of the Episcopal Church from the Diocese of Montreal, Canada. Members of his congregation say that his quiet but steadfast efforts have been very helpful to his church and to the community.

Since the death of Mrs. Macdonald, a few years ago, a daughter, Miss Jean Macdonald, now a nurse in the Fayette County Memorial Hospital, has been the only member of his family residing here with him. Two married daughters, Mrs. Margaret A. Jett and Mrs. Mary Jett live in Columbus. A son James lives in Dayton and another son John lives in Montreal, Canada.

Members of the church congregation here have planned a farewell dinner for the pastor and his daughter for Sunday evening.

Since Rev. Macdonald came to the Washington C. H. parish, a Sunday School building has been added to the church on East Street and other improvements made.

The pastor states that he has enjoyed his stay here very much and has found the people of this city and county very friendly and helpful.

Announcement of the replacement here by Rev. Macdonald is to be made by a special congregational committee later.

Hamburger Is Becoming Hard To Buy Here

That old standby--hamburger--is becoming a scarce item in Washington C. H. now that the government has gotten hold of the cow's tail.

This is what a spot survey of supermarkets here Wednesday morning revealed.

Two supermarket managers lamented about the scarcity of shank meat, used for grinding. They say it will be impossible to get any within the next week or so.

The scarcity is developing because cattlemen, uncertain of the market situation after a government roll back of beef prices, are not selling as many cattle as they did before the rollback.

Union Stockyards, which had a livestock sale Wednesday, reported that the number of cattle brought in was about the average for any sale day.

"It's a little too early to report anything yet", a spokesman said, "but it looks like we're going to have a better run today than we've had in the past few weeks", he said late Wednesday morning.

"I don't see why people don't go back to eating pork", he said. Producers Stockyards reported, however, that at its sale Tuesday 30 percent less cattle went on sale.

The word cabbage comes from the French "caboche" meaning head.

New Sales Tax Law in Effect

Casual Sales of Cars and Trailers

Casual and isolated sale of motor vehicles and house trailers are now subject to a sales tax.

The new law became effective May 21, and is known as the Mechem-Kirkpatrick bill.

Briefly, the new legislation requires the clerk of courts to collect the sales and use tax due on all transactions involving the application for certificates of title on motor vehicles and house trailers.

In those instances where the purchaser of a motor vehicle or house trailer files a proper certificate of exemption the sales of use tax will not apply.

The exemptions are set forth in section 6290-5 of the bill.

The collection of the sales tax on motor vehicles and house trailers where the sale is made by an Ohio vendor, will be in the same manner as in the past, by cancellation of prepaid sales tax receipts.

Whenever an affidavit regarding price is executed by the clerk of courts, a notarial fee is collected.

The usual amount of sales tax will be collected from such casual sales of motor vehicles and house trailers.

Books Circulated in 14 County Schools

Some 4,500 books were circulated 25,799 times during the past school year in the 14 county schools according to Miss Elizabeth Johnson, librarian here. She said all the books have been returned to the library.

'What You Again?' Zeke Arehart in Court 42nd Time

His 42nd time in police court here, again resulted in Clarence (Zeke) Arehart, itinerant barber, being sent to the workhouse Tuesday.

Arehart was picked up for intoxication—the usual charge—and was fined $10 and costs and given 30 days in the Cincinnati Workhouse.

Police Chief Vaiden Long took Arehart to the workhouse Tuesday afternoon.

However, Arehart had been in the institution before, so it was not new to him. He has also done time in the Dayton Workhouse, Chief Long said.

Chief Long consulted Arehart's record and found 42 cards representing 42 different offenses, chiefly intoxication, over a period of years.

Cases scheduled to come before Police Court Justice Richard R. Willis during Wednesday included:

Melvin Dean Wieland, 21, who posted $25 on a charge filed by the state patrol of improper operation of a motor vehicle.

Mervin J. Smith, 30, of near Washington C. H., arrested at the same time on Temple Street, for reckless operation. He also posted $25 bail for his appearance.

Police picked up Richard Green, 25, New Vienna, for driving 60 miles an hour on Clinton Avenue, and John V. Berkard of Cumberland, Md., for driving 55 miles an hour on Washington Avenue. Both posted $20 bail for appearance in police court.
